

SHAPIRO DAVIS FOR PA

Together, Josh Shapiro and Austin Davis are going to make sure working Pennsylvanians don't just get by — but have the opportunity to get ahead. As our next Governor and Lieutenant Governor, Josh and Austin will take on the big fights and get things done for Pennsylvanians.

The Pennsylvania Democratic Party has endorsed both candidates.

Josh Shapiro

Josh grew up in Montgomery County and married his high-school sweetheart Lori. His career in public service began when he successfully ran for State Representative and then he became County Commissioner of Montgomery County, Pennsylvania's third-largest.

Since 2017, Josh has served as Pennsylvania's Attorney General. In office, he exposed the Catholic Church's cover up of child sexual abuse, protected health care access for nearly 2 million Pennsylvanians, repeatedly protected reproductive rights, and defended the right to vote from Donald Trump dozens of times to make sure every ballot was counted.

Josh is running for Governor to take on the biggest fights and solve Pennsylvanians' most pressing problems. He's done that his entire career, and he'll continue doing it as Pennsylvania's next Governor.

Austin Davis

A lifelong resident of McKeesport, Austin knows the struggles working families face firsthand. After becoming a first generation college graduate, he has spent his career in public service — eventually becoming the first Black Representative of the 35th district in the Mon Valley.

Austin has spent his career fighting for the people of Western Pennsylvania — including communities that are too often forgotten in Harrisburg. He's fought for working people — advocating to make health care more affordable, supporting a higher minimum wage, and working to bring good-paying jobs to Western Pennsylvania.

Austin is running to be our first Black Lieutenant Governor and the highest ranking Black elected official in Pennsylvania history.
